Object: Wikipedia's page photography - copyright licence authorization

Dear Sirs,

my name is Claudio Marenzi and I am writing regarding the object above. More specifically, I would like to provide clarifications regarding the authorized use of a picture uploaded by a user on the Wikipedia's page referring to myself.

Indeed, the picture is a portrait of myself which has been shoot in 2015 by a photographer (Mr. Alejandro Ovejero) on my commission. When commissioning the shooting service, I have also obtained and paid for the ownership of all intellectual property rights connected to the photo.

From that moment on, I have used and licensed the picture for several occasions, also connected to the communication and promotion of the company I am President and legal representative, namely the Italian fashion company Herno S.p.A.. This is the reason why the photo is also showed on other websites.

In light of the above, as owner of the photo and the connected intellectual property rights, I have authorized and licensed the use of my portrait photo for the upload on the Wikipedia's page referred to myself.

I hope this communication shall resolve any dispute and/or requests for clarification regarding the photo and its use. In any case, I remain available for further discussions.

Best regards,

Claudio Marenzi
